

A Subversive Art:
The New Potential of American Film Culture

by Amy Frazier

submitted in partial completion of the Plan of Concentration
December 2005

Plan Sponsors:
JAY CRAVEN and DANA HOWELL

MARLBORO COLLEGE, MARLBORO VERMONT

MANY THANKS

Thanks to Maya Deren and Amos Vogel for appearing just when I needed them.

Thanks to Jay Craven for taking on a new senior whom he'd never met during a semester when trust was all he had to go on. Thanks to Dana Howell for her unflagging support and encouragement over the span of many years. Thanks to Ken Peck for all eight of his W's. Thanks to Rick Winston and Karen Cooper for their time and insight.

Thanks to Doug Walker for getting more than he bargained for and embracing it enthusiastically, as well as for his considerable talent and perceptiveness; and thanks to Shea Walker for her patience. Thanks to Morgan Jon Fox for being the colorful anchor of our local film scene and for his extra brain and pair of hands. Thanks to Ben Siler and Tommy Kha for their respective eccentricities and for their capable crewage. Thanks to Sarah Ewell for putting her trust in a green director. Thanks to Diana Powell for her friendship and for always keeping the conversation interesting. And thanks to everyone at the Memphis Digital Arts Co-operative for their faith that my modest expertise went deeper than just talk.

Thanks to the ladies of the Hot Springs Documentary Film Institute -- Darla Dixon, Susan Martin, Melanie Masino, and Gretchen Taylor -- who gave me my first taste of how stressful and rewarding film exhibition can be.

Thanks to the Strays: Shaw Izikson, John Hudnall, Stefan Hurzeler, Jesse Lex, Miah King and JD Leach; and thanks to the honorary Strays, Ethan Friend and Nathan Smith. And thanks to Randy Schmidt and Jackie Elliott, who aren't exactly strays but who are beloved friends just the same.

Thanks to Chris Smyth who found me here when I was 21 and who has talked me through my entire life ever since.

And thanks to my wonderful mother, Nan Lewis, for... well, everything.

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
An Anagram on the Ideas of Maya Deren	6
Amos Vogel and the Way Forward: Looking Back to Find the Future of Film Exhibition	35
Appendix: An Interview with Karen Cooper of Film Forum	88
Screenplay: Eyes of a Blue Dog	101

